

Emergency Medical Loan Account

What is the Employee Benefit?

Employers can offer emergency funds to their employees who might need additional financial assistance for qualifying healthcare expenses at any time throughout the plan year. The employer determines who qualifies for a loan, defines the terms of that loan, and makes the loan to the employee. They do not need to fund the account until they grant a loan. With maximum configurability options, this account lets the employer determine the maximum credit per employee, the payback length, and the method of repayment.
